International Pushback Against Medical Interventions for Gender Dysphoria – Dr. Andre Van Mol

Dr. Van Mol asserts, “The case for gender (transition) affirming therapy—which is more realistically termed gender imitating medical intervention—for gender dysphoria and incongruence is precipitously weakening. Leading its takedown are comprehensive literature reviews. These are surprisingly few, but each has led to a sea change of practice for gender dysphoria in their respective nations of origin abroad.”

D. Van Mol concludes, "All these comprehensive literature reviews come to the same conclusions that the body of scientific literature in support of transition-affirming medical interventions for gender dysphoria and incongruence in minors is of low to very low quality. The UK, Sweden and Finland have reversed their previous medical intervention pathway in favor of strong emphasis on the need for deep and continued mental health evaluation and treatment for both patient and family. Florida is leading the efforts to do the same in the United States. The evidence mounts that there is a more honest way to deal with gender confusion and incongruence than chemical sterilization and surgical mutilation of otherwise healthy bodied youth.”
